

To the FCC:

As a parent of younger children and also for myself and husband, file this complaint for the proposal that indecency standards be lowered for earlier hours that children would be watching. We try everything we can to not have them see images that would be harmful not only to their development, but to the desensitizing of their minds to what is right and wrong. This is America and until I want to move to Europe, I don't want to see this level of indecency myself on the television. The enjoyment in programming that I once had is decreasing because producers are pandering to the lowest common denominator. Please do not let "Hollywood" press you further to make a change that so many do not want. Those who want that content can pay extra and risk their children's minds to the content, but let's not risk those who would like to be able to switch channels without fear of seeing something they deem inappropriate. Thank you.
